EI Malcriado says

By the Editor

EL MALCRIADO received a letter last week which I would like to share with our readers.

Dear Editor:

Several months ago I wrote requesting information about Chavez and the grape strike. I'm a VISTA (Volunteers in Service to America) worker among the migrants here in --.

Lately I've received two issues of EL MALCRIADO; apparently someone has paid for my subscription, for which I'm grateful.

But now I have one request. Would it be possible to send EL MALCRIADO in a plain brown envelope or else folded up in brown paper imprinted with my address?

In a small agricultural town like ---(pop. 1500), too many people, such as the powerful farmers, will know I'm receiving EL MALCRIADO and they might start getting panicky!

I'm sure you understand that as a VISTA volunteer, I must be careful about receiving controversial literature.

Please let me know if it's possible to send me EL MALCRIADO in a brown envelope. Thank you.

Sincerely,

NAME withheld
VISTA VOLUNTEER

I cannot decide whether such a letter needs a comment or not. Since it is extremely inconvenient for us to mail our paper in a plain brown wrapper, we are cancelling the lady's subscription. We found that we had started it as a gift because her name appeared on a list of donors to our movement.

If indeed freedom in this country has deteriorated so much that receiving a labor union newspaper is dangerous then we indeed sympathize with the lady.

However, we wonder how effective the VISTA program can be if the subject of labor unions for farm workers must be discussed behind a plain brown wrapper.

The lady writes, "I'm sure you understand that as a VISTA volunteer, I must be careful about receiving controversial literature."

We're sure that nobody would criticize her for receiving Fortune magazine, or the growers' trade newspaper, The Packer, but to read the workers' newspaper is dangerous. While she works in a federal program of aid to the poor, she still must fear the growers!

We do not ask that VISTA volunteers organize for the United Farm Workers, but we fail to see why keeping abreast of our movement could be a crime.

Incidentally, there is a rumor about that J. Edgar Hoover reads The Daily Worker.
DELANO, Aug. 13—UFWOC posted a silent vigil in front of Delano police headquarters tonight, less than an hour and a half after a veteran union member was trapped by three cars on a county road and severely beaten while his five children looked on.

By Wednesday night, the vigil had drawn several hundred supporters.

The victim was Manuel Rivera, 55. He spent several months in the hospital after a large truck ran over him on a picket line during the Goldberg ranch strike in November, 1966. This time Rivera's injuries were less serious. However, after being released from the Delano Hospital following emergency treatment Tuesday night, Rivera collapsed at work Wednesday and fell unconscious into an irrigation ditch.

UFWOC Director Cesar Chavez called for the vigil after union executives tried without success to induce police to arrest Rivera's attackers.

Despite the contention of Union attorneys that each had grounds for immediate felony arrests, Delano Police, the California Highway Patrol and the Kern County Sheriff all refused to act.

"I'll stay there until we get some justice," Chavez said, and dismissed as just a "trend" Chavez's version of the incident.

Wednesday, during the vigil, Chavez made it clear that far more than the most recent incident is involved. "We don't feel safe," he told EL MALCRIADO. "The Kern County Sheriff's Office and the Delano Police are so tied in with the growers that it is impossible for them to administer justice in the case of the strikers."

Copies were sent to many legislators, including senators Kennedy, McCarthy, and McGovern.

When a Delano Record reporter told Chavez the police were waiting for him to approach them with a complaint, Chavez snapped: "We've been approaching them with complaints for the last three years. We are not approaching them any more!"

Then, the reporter demanded, how long would the vigil last? "Until we get help from the outside," Chavez replied. Delano is not a kingdom, you know."

Rivera told his story Wednesday, after receiving treatment for his injuries. A member of the Rubio family, he said, followed Rivera and his five children, ages 3 to 10, home from a UFUC meeting at Filipino Hall. As he pulled into the driveway of his Asti Street home, Rivera said, Rubio's car struck his from behind.

Rivera followed this Rubio as he fled, headlights off, across First Avenue and south on Albany Street.

As he passed in front of UFUC headquarters, the Rubio car narrowly missed striking Chavez and Leroy Chatfield, director of the Service Center.

On Albany, Rivera found six more men, including several members of the Rubio family, waiting in two cars. He was forced to halt, and all seven males emerged, brandishing sticks.

One of the men opened the door to Rivera's car and began to beat him with a bato, the victim charges. In the struggle that ensued, Rivera recalls being battered to the ground, struck with sticks and gouged with handfuls of dirt, while the two youngest assailants kept his own sons at bay with nail-studded sticks.

Rivera lost consciousness, he says, and came to to find Chatfield standing over him. (Chatfield had become alarmed when he saw Rivera and his family following a Rubio, and decided to investigate.)

As the paper goes to press, law enforcement officials are still refusing to let Rivera swear out a complaint against his attackers, pending an investigation by the District Attorney's office in Bakersfield.

And, via his subordinates in California, Ramsey Clark's reply reached Chavez early Wednesday. The incident had been investigated by his office, he said, and dismissed as "just a brawl."
CANADIAN LABOR CONGRESS URGES BOYCOTT AID

OTTAWA, August 9—The struggle for the rights of farm workers became an international movement here today, as the Canadian Labor Congress resolved "actively to join in the international effort to withhold patronage from all non-union California grapes."

Like the AFL-CIO in this country, the CLC, speaks for Canada's major international unions. The resolution, perhaps the strongest yet obtained by UFWOC, calls upon every member of CLC's affiliate unions "to refuse to purchase and to handle these (California) grapes."

"The CLC calls upon all provincial governments and other public institutions to refrain from purchasing non-union grapes," the resolution added.

After meeting in Ottawa with UFWOC staffers Marshall Ganz, Jessica Govea and Rudi Ahumada, the CLC executive council agreed that the California workers "have been shamefully exploited by California grape growers, working for substandard wages and inhuman working conditions."

The toughly worded resolution also noted that "these workers face a lack of legal organizational rights by virtue of their exclusion from the NLRA and a lack of adequate protection against grower-instigated violence and the illegal importation of strikebreakers from Mexico."

Canadian consumers account for some 16 percent of the market for California grapes.

WASHINGTON REPORT

WASHINGTON, August 8—Michael McCarthy, 17-year-old son of presidential hopeful Senator Eugene McCarthy, joined the first UFWOC picket line to establish the grape boycott in the nation's capital.

Also on the 30-man line in front of Washington's International Safeway Market was Ann Hart, McCarthy organizer and daughter of Sen. Philip A. Hart (d-Mich).

McCarthy has urged nationwide support for the fast-spreading boycott. UFWOC representatives assured the Washington press they would picket stores in every food chain in the city.
SAN FRANCISCO—Fifty Million dollars in compensatory and punitive damages are demanded of three Kern County growers in a suit filed by UFWOC General Counsel Jerome Cohen in San Francisco last week.

The UFWOC suit alleges that Bruno Disposito Company, Sabovich Brothers and John J. Kovacevich have sold scab grapes in boxes bearing a Union label.

Cohen told a press conference of San Francisco newsmen the suit demanded damages because the growers' action put the existence of the Union in jeopardy, and that the value of a farm workers' labor union to the workers over the next decade would be many millions of dollars.

In response to a reporter's question, Cohen said he filed the suit with the purpose in mind of attempting to halt the false labelling, as well as to secure damages for the effect on the Union of the alleged fraud.

Cohen mentioned truth in packaging legislation and attempts to defraud consumers as basis for the suit.

L.A. CONGRESSMAN PLEDGES SUPPORT

Congressman George E. Brown, Jr., of Los Angeles, paid a visit today to the office of the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee at 3015-1/2 East First Street, Los Angeles, and pledged his "unqualified support" to the organization headed by César Chávez and centered in Delano, California.

The Los Angeles Congressman toured the office, met the office Director, Mr. Joe Serda, and his enthusiastic staff, and accepted a bumper sticker with the slogan "Don't Buy Grapes." Upon accepting the sticker, Congressman Brown commended the office workers and reiterated his support of the current boycott of California grapes.

Brown stated also that he would "continue to speak out in support of the organizing efforts of César Chávez and his United Farm Workers Organizing Committee, both on the floor of Congress and wherever else it may be helpful to do so."

Congressman Brown continued, "There are those who feel that urban congressmen have no business expressing their views on this subject, but I want to point out that a large percentage of my constituents have a strong and natural affinity with their compatriots in the fields. I do also, and I will continue to speak out on this issue."
Education--For What?

by Antonio Orendain
Treasurer, UFWOC

"There are wise men whose only book is that of life, and in whose wisdom there is more science than is found in the wisdom of the literature. And when they were tested they always measured up."

"The growers should stop trying to impress us with the old story that we have no education. They should stop threatening to replace us with machines. They are not, as they say, giving us jobs out of pure charity. They say to us, 'Work in our fields in the daytime, and go home and study at night. Some­day you may have a ranch like ours, and then you will understand all our problems.' "If you demand more money," they tell us, "we will go out of business, or we will replace you with machines. Then you will never become educated. You will just starve to death."

"But I ask these growers, what happened to those of us who once cut sugar beets, or those who picked your potatoes? I have searched for those friends who worked in those fields with me, in California and all over this country. Their children tell me, 'They are in a better life.' But they mean that they are dead, not in retirement with a decent pension.

"Those poor workers never recieved any pensions. The growers found it cheaper to harvest with machines. The growers never gave a damn for our job. They thought they had been doing us a favor. Perhaps the only thing they were right about is our lack of education. But the land doesn't worry about who cultivates it. The only thing she needs is care.

"What would happen if all of us were educated and nobody wanted to cultivate the land? Would she produce anything by herself? Or maybe it is because of their diplomas that the growers have the right to steal what we win with our work.

"I would also like to tell the growers not to ask the governor to intervene. If he wants to help them, he should follow the footsteps of Governor Brown, who found out what was wrong between growers and workers, and solved the problem.

"We want Reagan to remember that we too are human. He should remember that all the Indians he used to kill in his cowboy movies were his fellow workers. After work he took a coffee break with them.

"We want a coffee break too, even if we don't have the honor of sharing it with the governor. But we still invite him to come and see these fields, to share with us the hot sun that gives us ideas that seem "activist."

"The governor should know that the sun he enjoys on his summer patio is the same sun we feel on our backs every day. It is this sun that makes us curse half the world each day, from eleven in the morning to four in the afternoon.

"We don't want alms. We want respect for our work. We want to solve our own problems. With the boycott, we are fighting many powerful people. Pancho Villa and Zapata fought many people too. The only difference is that they used 30-30's. We don't do that. We cannot afford to lose our leaders on the battlefields. This way, you will never be able to enslave us again. Remember that the only solution is very simple. Don't do us any more favors. Give us what is just for our work.

(Translated from the Spanish)
ENOUGH IS ENOUGH!

In four separate civil suits, each stemming from violence or threats of violence against union members and supporters, UFWOC lawyers have filed for damages totalling a painful $515,070.

The largest claim has been filed on behalf of Bill Richardson, the young Seminarian who was brutally beaten in a Coachella Valley vineyard July 2. Richardson is demanding $410,000 in actual and punitive damages from Ralph S. Jacobs and David Freedman & Co., a major Coachella grower. In his complaint, Richardson said he jumped onto the hood of a truck that was apparently attempting to run him down on a picket line. The truck carried him into the fields, where he was held by scab workers until two ranchers arrived. Richardson charges that the ranchers beat him, breaking his nose.

UFWOC lawyers Jerry Cohen and Dave Averbuck are also representing Peter Williamson, a law student volunteer who has alleged that José Mendoza pointed a rifle at his head in front of the union headquarters July 18. Mendoza, self-styled organizer of the scab union, Agricultural Workers Freedom to Work Association, is frequently seen cruising the street in front of UFWOC headquarters. Damages sought in this case total $30,000.

Fr. Mark Day is seeking $28,000 in damages for an alleged assault and battery on him at the Mosesian ranch near Arvin, July 16. The defendants are William Mosesian Co. and Mike Mosesian.

Dale Van Pelt, a member of the migrant ministry, has filed a $20,000 suit charging he was struck by Milton Freedman while marching on a picket line in the Coachella Valley.

ATTACK FILTH

UFWOC attorneys Jerome Cohen and David Averbuck have filed suit on behalf of four California grape pickers charging their employers with failure to provide private, sanitary toilets and hand washing facilities in the fields.

Each of the four pickers is suing for $9,000 'on behalf of himself and all other workers similarly situated.'

The workers charge that they are forced to perform bodily functions in the fields where they work, and suffer personal discomfort, humiliation, and mental anguish as a result. The suits also charge that the public health is threatened. Grapes from the ranches involved, it warns, are an avenue for dangerous parasites and communicable disease. By avoiding the expense of the sanitary facilities required by law, the suit adds, the defendants are in unfair competition with the growers who do provide them.

The four defendants are D.M. Steele and Son, Virginia Gudedra, Giumarra Vineyards, and David Freedman & Co.

The suits reach from Coachella all the way up the Valley," Averbuck noted. "And there will be more coming, thanks to the reports we get from the members on the conditions in the fields."

L.A. TIMES SAYS:

Growers May Be 'Crippled'

"The boycott being pushed by Chavez and his AFL-CIO United Farm Workers Organizing Committee," the Los Angeles Times reported Monday, "could cripple California's multi-million dollar grape industry which provides nearly all of the table grapes eaten by Americans."

This bit of good, but hardly surprising news was the essence of a long, thoughtful article by Harry Bernstein, the Times' labor editor.

To Bernstein, "the most impressive aspect of the boycott, making it different from others backed by Unions, is the broad cross section of support it has received."

"The boycott is supported by church groups, civil rights organizations, and political leaders ranging from the mayors of half a dozen cities to both candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination, Vice President Humphrey and Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy."

And Bernstein reports, "While they hope and expect the boycott will flop, growers make no secret of their fears that it may succeed."

The reporter quotes John Giumarra Jr., lawyer and heir apparent to Giumarra Fruit Co. as saying, "If our workers went on strike, they could have us at the bargaining table to make some kind of a deal within a week."

The Giumarra memory is short. When the strike was called August 3 of last year, 70 percent of Giumarra's workers left the fields.

The article also outlines a new "Inter-Faith Coalition for the Grape Boycott" which is now being formed in Los Angeles. On it are the Rev. James Jones, president of the Los Angeles City School Board, Sister Mary Corita, the famous artist in residence at Immaculate Heart College, and Rabbi Albert Lewis, social action chairman of the Southern California Board of Rabbis.

WOODVILLE TENANTS SUPPORT BOYCOTT

WOODVILLE, August 8--A unanimous resolution supporting the UFWOC grape boycott was passed today at the general meeting of the Woodville Independent Tenants Association.

In announcing the resolution, the members emphasized their objection to the growers' refusal to allow collective bargaining rights for the workers.

Noting that farm workers have none of the protection afforded industrial workers, the association said it wished to congratulate Chavez and his followers for their great courage and perseverance and offer them a helping hand.

The Tenants Association is a delegate agency of the Tulare County Community Action Agency.
EL MALCRIADO, Thursday, August 15, 1968

NO CITY KEYS FOR UFWOC AMIGOS

DELANO, August 5—Police Chief James Ailes today denied UFWOC a permit for a Labor Day solidarity parade, which, according to Director César Chávez, would bring as many as 25,000 supporters to the city. For a city that worries about its "image gap," Delano is a remarkably inhospitable place.

Given the depth of the support Chávez has been getting around the country, this number would certainly include many political and religious bigwigs whom most towns would welcome with the key to the city. But Delano wants them to stay home.

UFWOC announced this week that it would appeal Ailes's decision to the city council. City Manager Gerald Minford, who recommended the denial, told EL MALCRIADO that police and sanitary facilities are too scarce in Delano to handle a crowd of this size. "If they cut it down to somewhere in the neighborhood of 10,000," Minford said, "we might be able to handle it."

But the major problem, Minford suggested, was the Agricultural Workers Freedom to Work Association, a scab "union," made a request for a parade with the same number of people over the same route scheduled for the same day. Minford did not say, however, that the city had to either grant both requests, or deny both. Since the UFWOC applied first, he explained, the city could have denied AWFWA a permit on the grounds that another parade was already scheduled.

"But we had to face the fact that they (the AWFWA) were probably going to be there anyway," Minford added. "As public officials we have to assume there would be a large anti-union faction in town. We have an obligation to protect the citizens."

"Protect them from what?" Well, said Minford, "Chávez has indicated in past demonstrations that his group is not going to create a problem. And that is probably true of the other group as well. But if they were both here together, the leadership might have trouble handling them."

How many people show up for the October 5 Harvest Holidays parade? "I don't know the answer to that," says Minford. "But at Harvest Holiday people come here for festivities, for fun. It's a completely different climate."

But this year, Delano's reputation as California's fun city may be jeopardized by political reality. If its appeal to City Council is denied, the UFWOC is considering inviting those 25,000 sympathizers to the Harvest Holidays.

EL MALCRIADO submitted an application this week to have a float in the Harvest Holidays parade.

Union officials were considering inviting the 30,000 spectators and participants expected for the Labor Day parade to the Harvest Holidays instead.

OFFICES AT THE SERVICE CENTER
CRLA SUIT

The Internal Revenue Service was restrained from attaching 100 percent of a taxpayer's wages recently, after California Rural Legal Assistance filed suit in federal court on behalf of Mrs. Elisa Beltran, a Spanish-speaking lettuce picker from Salinas.

Attorneys said she faces eviction, loss of her job, car and furniture, because the Internal Revenue Service has attached all of her wages for payment of a back tax bill while she believes that part of it may have been paid by her estranged husband. She offered to pay installments on the bill, and did turn over one paycheck of $75 to the tax collector. Following that, the Internal Revenue Service demanded her next two complete paychecks. The third week, she kept only $3 to buy six boxes of tortillas and a can of beans for herself and her two children.

Attorneys said Mrs. Beltran is completely illiterate, and is the sole support of the children.

According to reports, the Internal Revenue Service is the only agency which is permitted to seize 100 percent of a person's wages. Every state prohibits this practice, and President Johnson recently called for a law limiting attachments to $7 of the first $100 of weekly wages to protect workers in all states.

The restraining order which prohibits the 100 percent levy pending outcome of the Beltran suit was issued by Judge William T. Sweigert after the suit was filed by attorneys Robert L. Gnaizda and Martin R. Glick of the CRLA's Salinas office.
Humphrey's letter

Dear Mr. Chavez:

I want you and your fellow officers to know how very much I appreciate your meeting with me in Los Angeles last Sunday on the problems being encountered by farm workers as they attempt to organize to bargain with their employers. Indeed, they are national problems. They deserve national attention.

Your remark that farm workers "want no special favors -- merely the chance to build a union to help themselves," sets the direction for a sound national policy for farm labor.

I have long been committed to the extension of the National Labor Relations Act to cover agricultural workers. To exclude them from any protective labor legislation just does not make sense. Your briefing reassures me. It gives me additional insight. I shall redouble my efforts to encourage the enactment of that legislation now before the Congress to extend coverage.

Most particularly, I appreciate your detailed recitation of the negative impact of our immigration practices and enforcement policies on the efforts of farm workers to improve their lot. This must be changed. If the fault is looseness in enforcement, the enforcement must be changed and tightened. If the fault is in national administrative policy, then that must be changed. I think you are correct in your analysis that no reasonable degree of fairness in recognizing the rights of farm workers, on a comparable basis with other American workers, can occur without substantive change in enforcement of immigration procedures to accompany the extension of the NLRA to farm workers.

I want to wish you success with your national boycott effort. As more people know that the boycott is almost your only effective organizing device, more and more will support it.

As you know, I have spoken out in behalf of your movement many times in recent years -- at last year's conference in El Paso, in connection with the Poor People's Campaign, and at other times. My endorsement of the drive to extend the National Labor Relations Act to farm workers was published several weeks ago in a letter to the editor of the New York Times.

In light of this, my support for your endeavors should be self-evident. However, I want to make it clear that I do endorse your efforts and I hope you will feel free to use that endorsement and the contents of this letter in any way you feel will best serve "La Causa."

Sincerely,

Hubert H. Humphrey

Cranston Urges NLRB Coverage

In a telegram to Rep. Cecil King, head of the California Congressional delegation, Cranston said, "There is no reason why these most exploited of American workers should not have the same rights that the NLRA gives to other workers."

The bill extending the NLRB to cover agricultural workers is now pending in the House. "Some argue," Cranston continued, "that it is difficult to provide such protection for farm workers because theirs are seasonal jobs, but canning workers and lumbermen, to name just two other fields, both enjoy such protection."

"The resistance by employers and employer groups to this extension of the NLRA is unbelievable," he said. "I'll find it hard to comprehend why the farm worker should continue to subsidize the prices of vegetables and fruits through low wages and deplorable working conditions."

Cranston also pointed out that the AFL-CIO has recently launched a nationwide drive in support of the pending bill, and that many church groups have also recently banded together in an organization to support this and other measures designed to protect farm workers.
Cleveland, August 8--The major supermarket chains here have agreed to display large signs over their produce counters informing customers of the grape boycott.

The signs read:

TO THE CONSUMER:
PLEASE DON'T BUY
CALIFORNIA TABLE GRAPES
HELP THE CALIFORNIA GRAPE WORKERS
BETTER THEIR LIVING CONDITIONS.

The signs represent a compromise between UFWOC and local union members who are promoting the national boycott, and Cleveland's supermarket owners who say they are committed to purchase and sell California grapes for the rest of the year.

In addition to displaying these signs wherever they sell California grapes, the store owners agreed not to advertise or promote sale of the grapes. The owners even agreed to pay for one half-page newspaper advertisement to promote the Cleveland boycott.

And, perhaps most important in the long run, the markets have warned California growers that things will get still worse if they refuse to sit down with UFWOC this year.

In the agreement they signed with the UFWOC and the Cleveland Federation of Labor, AFL-CIO, the market owners said they 'will give serious consideration to not buying and/or selling California table grapes if the consumer boycott is still in progress.'

Newspaper reports said that Campbell had promised to pay farmers the cost of growing the unharvested tomatoes plus a "reasonable profit," but no one seems to know how much that will be, and the open market is glutted.

Thomas J. Moore, manager of the New Jersey Agricultural Marketing Association, said the price of a basket of tomatoes had dropped from 75 cents to 45 cents in five days. Since contracted laborers were promised 20 cents per basket for picking, it was probable that much of the crop would be left on the vine.

Growers expected they could sell about 15 percent of the crop on the open market, leaving about 6 million bushels to be plowed under.

While the strike continued in the processing plant, farmers and workers alike wait to see if Campbell will settle with the Machinists, Meatcutters, and Teamsters. Unless they do, Campbell will have been successful in using a labor demand to damage suppliers and farm workers, as yet unorganized.

More than 250 tomato farmers and 10,000 workers in New Jersey and Pennsylvania are facing serious economic problems as the result of a strike against the Campbell Soup Company by members of the Meatcutters, Machinists, and Teamsters Unions.

According to reports in Philadelphia newspapers, Campbell had contracted to buy 300 million pounds of tomatoes this year for its Camden, New Jersey plant, now closed because of the strike.

After the shut-down was announced, Campbell cancelled orders with the 250 growers, who had contracted 8,000 Puerto Rican workers at $1.45 per hour for a 40-hour week.

The dependence of small farmers on the large processors such as Campbell's, may mean that the tomato crop will be left to rot in the fields, reports indicated.

Observers have noted that the tremendous economic power of the canners, packers, and processors often catch the small growers in a squeeze which accounts for the sub-standard working conditions and wages for farm workers.

Organizers of farm labor unions in Wisconsin report a similar situation in that state, where Libby, McNeil and Libby dominate the cucumber crop.

At last reports, farmers in the New Jersey - Pennsylvania area were attempting to negotiate with Campbell Soup for the undelivered crop.
ORENDAIN ARTICLE IN KENNEDY BOOK

A memorial tribute to the late Senator Robert F. Kennedy written by UFWOC treasurer Antonio Orendain is to be included in "A Tribute to Robert F. Kennedy," a book to be published by Doubleday & Co. on October 18.

Material for inclusion in the memorial book was selected by representatives of the Kennedy family, and the proceeds of its sale will go to the Robert F. Kennedy Memorial Fund, according to information furnished by the publishers.

Bay area caravan planned for Aug. 24

The Bay Area Food Caravan will make the trip from Oakland and San Francisco Saturday, August 24. Departure from Oakland will be at 7 AM from 568 47th Street. The group will leave the San Francisco Labor Temple, 2940 16th Avenue at 8 AM.

If you cannot come to Delano on the caravan, but wish to help, leave your food donations at the Labor Temple in San Francisco.

If you plan to come down, please call 655-3256 in Oak-land after 7 PM to leave your name. We'll see you here in Delano!
"NOW OR NEVER" STRUGGLE

DELANO, August 15—An urgent call for an all-out boycott action on the part of UFWOC supporters in cities across the United States and Canada was issued today by UFWOC Director Cesar E. Chavez. Chavez said the peak period of the Delano harvest would arrive by the second week in September, which leaves three weeks for complete preparations for halting the sale of California table grapes.

The UFWOC boycott, which covers all California table grapes, has become the principal weapon of the Union's organizing drive since violence and injunctions limited the effectiveness of picket lines. He also cited the virtually unlimited supply of strikebreakers across the Rio Grande as another cause for switching emphasis to the boycott.

Chavez called on all supporters of the Union to volunteer to assist the boycott. He said the Union would accept collect telephone calls from any part of the United States outside of California from concerned individuals and organizations who wish to assist the campaign.

Chavez, who has headed the three-year-old strike against California grape growers since its beginning, suggested the following plan of action for boycott supporters:

1. Go to your local supermarkets and stores, since you will probably be most effective at the stores where you are a regular customer.

2. Look for the table grapes. Almost all grapes for sale at this time of year are from California, and should be boycotted.

3. Approach the manager of the store and tell him to remove the table grapes from his counters. Tell him that the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee is conducting a consumer boycott because California growers have wrongfully denied them Union recognition. The growers have steadfastly refused to negotiate with the Union," Chavez said.

4. If the manager refuses to remove the grapes, feel free to tell him that you will be unable to shop at his store until he does so. Tell him that informational picket lines may soon be set up at stores that carry grapes in your city.

5. Contact your friends and concerned individuals and have them do the same thing. If you can, form small delegations and follow the same pattern. The more delegations that you can form, and the more stores that you can visit, the more support there will be for the boycott.

6. Contact the Delano office of the United Farm Workers for the address and phone number of your nearest boycott office. Collect calls

STEEL CITY SUCCUMBS

PITTSBURGH, August 8--In a statement issued today, the Mayor of Pittsburgh announced, "I am in complete support of the national effort to boycott California grapes."

"I would ask all citizens to refrain from purchasing California grapes," the Mayor added, "and to urge their grocers to refuse to stock them until the grape growers recognize the rights of farm workers to unionize."

The Mayor welcomed the boycott as "a significant development in the three-year battle of the UFWOC against the grape growers and their lobbyists who have excluded farm workers from the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act, the minimum wage law, and the Taft Hartley Act."

With his statement, the Pittsburgh official joined the mayors of such major Eastern cities as Detroit, Toledo, New York, Buffalo, Baltimore, and Cleveland in supporting the table grape boycott.

GROWERS DUCK CONGRESSMEN

DELANO, Aug. 15—Members of a Congressional Labor and Education subcommittee was scheduled to convene in Delano High School this morning to hear public testimony on the strike.

The strikers were to be represented by Cesár Chávez, UFWOC director, and witnesses with testimony on anti-union violence, illegal strikebreakers and unsanitary conditions in the fields.

A key witness is Manuel Rivera, victim of a vicious beating just south of Delano last Tuesday night.

Although they were invited to attend, the struck growers will not testify. Their spokesman, Martin Zinovitch has charged that, since two of the congressmen have endorsed the grape boycott, the hearings are rigged.

The GREEN CARD Issue

By Justicia Ranaremem

One of the most important legal fights of this season ended in a Los Angeles federal courtroom August 2. It ended in a victory for the workers—but an expensive victory in a battle that should never have been fought.

The battle began early this year when Immigration officials began to enforce the federal regulation which prohibits "green carders" coming into the U.S. to work in struck fields. Ten workers were charged with violating the regulation, arrested, and released on bail.

The impact of Immigration's action on Giumarra and the strike-breakers in his fields was put in black and white by the grower himself. What follows is from the brief he filed in Los Angeles in hopes of obtaining a court order barring the deportation of the 10 men:

The green card holders in the neighboring area, who do the harvest work for us, are refusing to work, because of the fear of arrest by the Immigration and Naturalization Service," Giumarra said.

If the court upholds immigration's action, Giumarra continued, "I would anticipate that our normal work force will be reduced by 25 percent of our anticipated harvest work force of 3,000 workers, with the resulting loss to Giumarra Vineyards of $2,200,000."

In simple terms, the law was on the books, Immigration officials finally enforcing it, and Giumarra was hurting.

Giumarra did not mention, of course, that he would have all the workers he needs if he would sit down with their Union and sign a contract.

He might have been reduced to that, save for a temporary restraining order issued by Federal Judge Peirson Hall, enjoining Immigration "from doing any act in regard to the operation, enforcement or execution of the challenged regulation." Immigration's hands were tied and green carders could cross the border as they pleased.

Hall's ruling was a triumph for Giumarra, of course, but its real impact was felt in Coachella, where the Thompson Seedless harvest was ripe, and a new UFWOC strike getting underway. Cesar Chavez and his organizers led 1,200 strikers out of the fields. But now there was nothing to stop the growers from driving 130 miles south to the border and picking up 1,200 more green carders.

Ironically, while the outcome of the case of immense importance to striking farm workers, UFWOC Counsel Jerry Cohen was never permitted to state the Union's case in court.

Temporary restraining orders are supposed to last 15 days. But Judge Hall got sick, and it wasn't until July 11 that Judge Manuel Real lifted the order, pending his final decision.

And that, when it came, was another masterpiece of irony. Neither Giumarra nor the 10 workers, he ruled, had been in any position to bring the suit to court in the first place.

Therefore, "Judgement for the defendants." (The federal officials who had tried to enforce the law were the defendants.)

Real's wording is not easy to follow, but it seems that he decided that Immigration's action was, legally, none of Giumarra's business. As for the 10 workers, the Judge suggested that they were so obviously not guilty of violating the green card regulation that they had no business challenging its constitutionality. When Immigration had finally been moved to fire its first shot against green carders, it had missed by a mile.

And so it goes in the courtroom. By taking a case he could not win to court, Giumarra won 22 invaluable days during which growers could import all the strike breakers they needed, while the strikers watched in hunger from the picket lines.

And they ask, why do we boycott?

Chavez said the Union's boycott office hoped to reach 50 additional cities during the remainder of August, in addition to the 28 which have full-time representatives and field offices.

He said that the 50 new cities would be dependent on volunteers who heeded the latest call for assistance, and said he hoped Union sympathizers and readers of EL MALCRIADO and word of a large sale of Spanish magazines, Books, and Records.
