Chavez's Union Supports Farm Workers' Campaign Against Congressional Agreements

By HENRY WENSTED

Chavez's United Farm Workers of America last week launched a drive to convince many farm workers of the necessity of supporting the Democratic candidate in the November election. Chavez's objective is to make his union an effective political weapon to press for better wages and working conditions. Chavez said his union would continue its push to make the Democratic Party the political answer to the problems of the farm workers.

The union began its campaign by mailing a letter to each member of Chavez's union. In the letter, Chavez called on the members to vote for the Democratic candidate in the upcoming election. Chavez argued that the Democratic Party was the only party that could bring about real change for the farm workers. Chavez said that the Republican Party was not interested in the needs of the farm workers and that the Democratic Party was the only party that could bring about real change.

Chavez's union is one of the largest farm worker organizations in the country. The union has a membership of over 20,000 farm workers in California. Chavez has been a champion of the farm workers and has been a vocal critic of the Republican Party.

The union's campaign is expected to be a major factor in the upcoming election. Chavez's union is expected to mobilize thousands of farm workers to vote for the Democratic candidate. Chavez said that he was confident that the Democratic candidate would win the election.

Chavez's union is not the only farm worker organization that is supporting the Democratic candidate. Other farm worker organizations, such as the National Farm Workers Association, have also endorsed the Democratic candidate.

The election is expected to be a close one. The Republican candidate is expected to receive support from many farmers and the Republican Party is expected to spend a large amount of money on the campaign.

The outcome of the election will have a significant impact on the farm workers. If the Democratic candidate wins, it is expected that the farm workers will receive better wages and working conditions. If the Republican candidate wins, it is expected that the farm workers will continue to face difficult conditions.
